REDDING.

The following is a copy of a demand made upon Rev John Beach by the authorities of Redding during the Revolution and it has led Rev Dr E. E. Beardsley to the belief that Mr Beach did not continue to pray for King George in Redding, though continuing to do so in Newtown. The original document is in the possession of Rev C. W. Kelly of Redding:

Revd Sir: We have no disposition to restrain and limit you or others in matters of conscience, but understanding that you in your Public Worship still continue to pray that the King of Great Britain may be strengthened to vanquish and overcome all his enemies, which manner of praying must be thought to be a great insult upon the Laws, Authority and People of this State, as you and all others can but know that the King of England has put the people of these United States from under his protection, declared them Rebels, and is now at open war with said States, and consequently we are his enemies. Likewise you must have understood that the American States have declared themselves independent of any foreign power. Now Sir, in order that we may have peace and quietness at home among ourselves, We desire that for the future you would omit praying in public that King George the third, or any other foreign prince or power may vanquish, etc., the People of this Land. Your compliance herewith may prevent you trouble.

We are, Revd Sir, with due Respect, Your Obedt, Humb' Servts,

Bishop at Consecration

FIRST AMERICAN BISHOP to officiate at Scottish consecration, the Rev. Walter H. Gray of Connecticut, right, stands with bishops at St. Andrew's Cathedral, Aberdeen. Others, from left, Bishop Edward F. Eason, who was consecrated as bishop of Aberdeen, and the bishop of the Argyle Isles. [AP.

Hartford Times, April 25, 1956.

Aberdeen, Scotland—(UP)—Bishop Walter H. Gray of Connecticut today became the first American clergyman to play a leading role in the enthronement of a Scottish bishop.

Bishop Gray joined high-ranking Episcopal clergymen in colorful ceremonies elevating the Very Rev. Edward F. Eason to bishop of Aberdeen and Orkney.

He was the first bishop to follow behind the bishop-elect as he led the stately procession of clergymen through St. Andrew's Cathedral here and up to the altar for the ceremony.

EARLIER, the American clergyman made arrangements to have the whole ceremony recorded so he could take it back to the United States.

Bishop Gray was invited to participate in the ceremony to emphasize the long and close relations between the American and Scottish Episcopal churches. This dates back to 1784 when the Rev. Samuel Seabury was consecrated as first Episcopal bishop of Connecticut here in Aberdeen.

BISHOP SEABURY was a founder of the Episcopal Church in America. His consecration here began the close link between the two churches which has never since been broken.

Bishop Gray is scheduled to fly back to the U. S. later this week and will be home for Sunday services in his own diocese. He said today that Aberdeen has changed greatly since his last visit in 1948.

"The warm hospitality with which I was received then has not changed, however," he added.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF EBEN EDWARDS BEARDSLEY

[From his manuscript in the Archives.]*

On this eighth day of January A.D. 1890---the eighty-second anniversary of my birth, I begin to note the principal incidents which make up the history of my life. I am of a goodly Church lineage. My grandfather Elisha Beardsley was baptized by the celebrated Dr Johnson of Stratford and served as a vestryman or clerk in St Paul's Church, Huntington, from 1768 to 1812, and at the annual meeting of the parish, Easter Monday, March 30, 1812, he was elected one of the four wardens and continued in that office to the day of his death, April 6, 1824. The Episcopalians in the town of Huntington originally formed one incorporated Society---but in 1805, a church was erected by them in the section called New Stratford (now Monroe) and consecrated four years later by Bishop Jarvis. My grandfather resided within the limits of New Stratford and of course became prominently identified with the new church, and brought up his six sons to make that their place of public worship. My father Elihu, a Connecticut farmer, was his fourth son and married for his second wife (his first died young and childless of consumption), Ruth Edwards, daughter of William and Charity (Beach) Edwards. Being the eldest of four sons I was naturally put in front and made the errand boy of the family. Until sixteen years of age my life was varied by work upon the farm and attendance at the village school. About this time I was sent to the Staples Academy in Weston, where I began the study of Latin---but at the end of a year I returned home and engaged for a few seasons in teaching a District School, having in one instance scholars older than myself "boarding around." Desiring to resume my studies & prepare for College, I was induced to attend the Episcopal Academy at Norwalk, Ct. then under the patronage and oversight of the Rev. Reuben Sherwood, Rector of St Paul's Church in that place. The Headmaster was the Rev. Allen C. Morgan who was afterwards Principal of the Episcopal Academy in Cheshire. I was admitted in 1828 to the Freshman Class of Trinity College, not long chartered and appealing very strongly for the support and patronage of Churchmen throughout the Country. Bishop Brownell was President and among the Professors were Horatio Potter, Hector Humphreys, Norman Pinney and Samuel Fuller. It was before the day of Railroads and rapid transit, and I have a painful remembrance of the long rides in an open wagon across the Country to reach New Haven in time to take a stage-coach for Hartford. On one occasion the horse became frightened and ran nearly a quarter of a mile throwing both myself and brother out---but providentially he was stopped soon enough to prevent injury to himself or the vehicle, and we shortly resumed our journey most thankful that we had escaped in such a danger with only bruises and scratches. The four years in College were quickly passed and my standing as a student was recognized by the honorable position given me in the order of exercises at Commencement. Literature was a favorite study and I improved all my leisure hours in using my pen and reading the best authors that came in my way. In my senior year, a classmate from Mass., Ebenezer C. Bishop, and a member of the class below us, Clement M. Butler, spent our Christmas vacation in College. We were often together and one evening Bishop proposed that we should compete for three prizes which had been offered by two periodicals---the compositions to be handed in within a given time. The Rural Repository, published in Hudson, N. Y., offered twenty dollars for the best tale, and five dollars for the best poem of a limited number of lines. The Ladies Mirror, published in Southbridge, Mass., offered ten dollars for the best tale. Butler was the only poet among us and was ready in a day or two to send off his effusion, but he failed to win the first prize. Bishop wrote for the Rural Repository and gained the twenty dollars, and I wrote for the Mirror and was rewarded with the highest prize. No money which I have ever earned since by my pen or in any other way has tasted so good as that little sum acquired in the pride of youthful ambition.

After graduating, I took a private classical school in Hartford which had already been established and was about to be relinquished by the Teacher. I was more successful than my predecessor, but at the end of a year, I received the appointment of a Tutor in my Alma Mater which I held until 1835. There I had become a candidate for Holy Orders and pursued theological studies, as best I could, in connection with the duties of the Tutorship. I was admitted to the Diaconate by Bishop Brownell on the 11th of August 1835, and in the following month was put in charge of St Peter's Church, Cheshire, which for several years had been served by the Principal of the Episcopal Academy. Dr Judd, who for a time took Demetrius Stamatiades, of Greece, a classmate of mine, for his Headmaster had retired and the doors of the Institution for a year were shut and the Academy green was as still as midnight. My old teacher at Norwalk succeeded him, and by devoting his whole energies and thoughts to his work soon put things on a better foundation and attracted as many students as could well be accommodated. His sudden death at the end of two years left the Institution again vacant, and the Trustees assembled and appointed me the Principal with the understanding that I might relinquish the position if I found it irksome and disagreeable. Prosperity attended me in this new change, and I retained it for several years. Soon after my election I proposed to the Parish to build a new church and I would give them my services as a subscription towards it, provided the edifice was completed within a limited time. When it was completed I resigned the Rectorship and confined my attention wholly to the Academy. But its care and responsibilities were not to my taste and I relinquished it in 1844 and resumed the charge of the Parish which had become vacant and somewhat divided. Meanwhile I had married Jane M. Matthews, daughter of the late Rev. Edmund Matthews of St Simon's Island, Georgia, who with her mother, a native of Cheshire, had returned to the North and had been living among friends in the village. My devotion to the work of the ministry led me to think of trying another field, if offered to me, where I might find a fresh stimulus to my mind and new opportunities for study. A third parish was formed in the compact limits of New Haven February, 1848, by the name of St Thomas's Church, and I was invited to become its Rector---an invitation which was accepted after mature consideration. The enterprise was the conception of men in moderate circumstances, and a chapel belonging to the first ecclesiastical society located in the lower part of Orange Street was hired and the opening services of the parish, which I conducted, were held Easter Sunday, April 20. The increase of the congregation was more solid than had been anticipated and soon turned the attention of the Vestry to the purchase of a lot on Elm Street and the erection of a brick chapel which would seat 300 or more people. It was completed and occupied in July, 1849. A lustrium had not passed away before it was deemed expedient to remove it and erect on the site a handsome stone church. This cost the Rector and the worshippers much anxiety and self-denial, but all obstacles and hindrances were finally overcome and step by step improvements were made as the parish increased in numbers and strength till now (1890) it is unsurpassed in richness, convenience and architectural beauty by any Episcopal Church in the city.

Says he needs new furniture, winter stores, and wine for his cellar. Every letter he receives from Mrs. J. contains mention of her debts, which now amount to over 7,000 francs. He hopes to be able to borrow from his cousin when he returns from Ohio. Mentions a parcel of books sent by S. Wood. Wishes the money paid on his house to come from earnings in Middletown. Speaks of a shipment of oil, part of which was lost in leakage.

FIELD, BENJAMIN H. Dated Nov. 25, 1837, at N.Y. To SFJ, Middletown. Re. purchase of a white porcelain dinner set for $150. Says he has been unable to decide about glassware.

[This important inventory of the JARVIS LETTERS in the State Library in Hartford will be continued in the next number. We have omitted above the following manuscripts: American and European school reports, bills, receipts, promissory notes, school prospectuses, itineraries, letters of credit, customs permits, etc. etc.----all important, of course, in a study of early nineteenth-century culture history. For a list of these documents, consult the inventories at the State Library. The next installment will bear more significantly upon Church history.]
